It was a historical season that would set the table for Bill Fennelly's success at Iowa State. Fennelly took over a program that had never reached the postseason and had just one 20-win season to its credit. It didn't take the Cyclones' new head coach long to change that.

In just his second year in Ames, Fennelly piloted the Cyclones to their first ever NCAA Championship appearance. His Cyclones won a school-record nine league games, including a convincing 74-56 win over No. 10 Texas, the school's first victory over a top-10 team. Non-conference wins over 1997 NCAA Championship participants Drake and Oregon set the table for the historic season. The Cyclones sat at 9-8 when January ended, but rolled off wins in seven of their eight February games, including their win over the Longhorns.

Iowa State added a win over Texas A&M in the first-ever Big 12 Championship before learning its postseason fate. The NCAA selection committee awarded Iowa State for its season with a berth in the tournament's West Regional and a trip to Charlottesville, Va., to face Utah.

While Iowa State fell to Utah, 66-57, it was a capper to a magical season. A junior, Jayme Olson led the team in that game with 18 points and 11 rebounds. She had been the floor leader of the Cyclones all season, averaging 17 points and seven rebounds for the year. Her scoring average was fifth in the Big 12, and she hit three-pointers at a 40 percent (56-of-138) clip.

Two other Cyclones were in double figures during the NCAA Championship game, with Tara Gunderson scoring 12 and Janel Grimm netting 11. Gunderson led the Big 12 in assists on the season with 4.6 per game. She also averaged 11 points per game while running the ISU offense.

Grimm continued her strong ISU career, averaging 13.7 points per game as a junior, ranking 11th in the league. She was also fifth in the conference in field-goal percentage (.551) and seventh in rebounding (7.1).

The 1996-97 Iowa State team set the stage for the unprecedented success that would follow the team throughout the Bill Fennelly era. The season catapulted Iowa State into the national women's basketball picture, allowing future conference titles and deep postseason runs to be possible.

Building on its success from the previous season's inaugural trip to the NCAA Championship, Iowa State soared to new heights during the 1997-98 campaign. Third-year coach Bill Fennelly led the Cyclones to a 25-8 record and the school's first ever NCAA postseason victory.

Starters Jayme Olson and Janel Grimm returned with postseason experience and newcomers Stacy Frese and Megan Taylor added new depth and talent to lead Iowa State to places where no other Cyclone team had been.

Iowa State began the season by winning 16 of its first 18 games and went on to take home a then-school-best 25 victories. The Cyclones climbed into the national polls for the first time ever, finishing ranked 24th in the USA Today poll and 23rd in the CNN/WBCS Coaches' Poll. Iowa State also posted a 12-4 record in Big 12 play to finish second in the conference, the team's then-highest-ever placing.

The team featured four standouts, with Frese leading the team by averaging 15.9 points per game on her way to All-Big 12 first team and Big 12 Newcomer of the Year honors.

Olson finished her Iowa State career as the school's all-time leading scorer. She was second-team all-conference after a senior campaign that saw her average 14.9 points per game. Grimm was also strong as a senior, scoring 12.8 points per game and being named to the All-Big 12 third team.

Iowa State also welcomed Taylor to Ames where she began what would become a sensational career in style. Taylor earned top honors for a Big 12 rookie for a season that saw her average 13.9 points per game.

After running through the Big 12 during the regular season, the Cyclones made their first trip to the Big 12 Championship semifinals. From there it was back to Ames and the NCAA Championship, with the first two rounds held in Hilton Coliseum. Iowa State earned a No. 4 seed and played Kent in the first round.

Kent came to play, but Frese would not let Iowa State be upset on its home floor. The sophomore guard was good for 25 points, including 11-of-14 from the free-throw line. Olson hit 8-of-10 shots for 18 points and Taylor added 15 in the 79-76 ISU win. It was the first NCAA Championship victory for Iowa State.

The Cyclones advanced to face Rutgers in the second round. A then-record crowd of 9,705 rocked Hilton. The game and a Sweet 16 berth was not decided until the final buzzer sounded, with Rutgers squeaking away with a 62-61 win. Taylor ended her spectacular freshman season with 28 points and Olson added 14.

The season might have been over, but success was just beginning for Iowa State. So close to advancing to the Sweet 16, the Cyclones would have to wait another year to taste the sweetness of the NCAA Championship's second weekend.

It was a game that would reshape the Iowa State women's basketball team's national standing. The Cyclones had enjoyed increasing success over the previous two seasons, making their first NCAA Championship appearance in 1997 and winning their first postseason game a season later. Now Iowa State found themselves in the Sweet 16 for the first time in school history, facing national powerhouse and No. 1 seed Connecticut.

It had been another season of success for Bill Fennelly and Iowa State. Stacy Frese, Megan Taylor and Monica Huelman had returned to lead the Cyclones, and the team was bolstered by the addition of Big 12 Newcomer of the Year Desirée Francis. Iowa State started the season 13-1 and won all 15 of its games at Hilton Coliseum. For the second consecutive year, ISU went 12-4 in conference play, placing second in the league. The team also made the Big 12 Championship title game for the first time in school history.

Ames hosted the first two rounds of the NCAA Championship for the second-straight season, with the Cyclones disposing of Santa Clara and Oregon in front of their home fans. Frese scored 31 in the 74-61 win over Santa Clara and Welle poured in 21 points and 10 rebounds to best Oregon, 85-70. Those wins set up a trip to the Sweet 16 and a matchup with top-seeded Connecticut.

The three-point shot has become a staple of Fennelly's teams, and it was a shot from behind the arc that propelled the Cyclones to the biggest victory in the program's history. With 5:26 to play, Huelman nailed a high-arching shot to put Iowa State ahead, a lead they would not relinquish on their way to a 64-58 victory. The shot was Huelman's only three of the game and one of two field goals for the junior, but it was a basket that would go down in Iowa State history.

Just like she had all season, Frese led the way for the Cyclones against Connecticut, scoring 16 and handing out five assists. The junior guard had earned a spot on the All-Big 12 first team and honorable mention All-American status with her play, averaging 17.2 points and 4.3 assists per contest.

Taylor added 13 in the Iowa State win; another great game for the second-team all-conference selection. Francis, a transfer from Kirkwood CC, scored eight and grabbed seven rebounds, consistent production from the Big 12 Newcomer of the Year. Freshman center Angie Welle and sophomore Tracy Gahan added 10 points each.

Iowa State's magical run ended two days later with an 89-71 loss to Georgia, but the season had been the best in school history. Fennelly was named WBCA District 5 Coach of the Year and was runner-up to Tennessee's Pat Summitt for National Coach of the Year. The Cyclones had matched the then-school-record of 25 victories set a season before and cemented itself as a player on the national stage.

The 1999-2000 season was another jewel in the Iowa State women's basketball team's crown. The Cyclones advanced to the NCAA Championship's Sweet 16 for the second consecutive season and Bill Fennelly became the winningest coach in the program's history in just his fifth campaign as coach. Led by an outstanding group of seniors, Iowa State claimed a share of the Big 12 Conference regular-season title and then won the Big 12 Championship by beating league co-champion Texas.

Coming off its Elite Eight run a season before, seniors Stacy Frese, Desiree Francis and Monica Huelman paced ISU to school records in both total wins (27) and conference wins (13).

Frese, who ended her Iowa State career as the school's all-time leader in three-point shots made, earned second-team All-America honors as well as being named an all-conference first-team selection. Frese averaged 13.8 points and five assists per game on her way to being a finalist for the Naismith Player of the Year Award.

Three other Cyclones earned all-conference honors, with Angie Welle being named to the second team and Francis and Megan Taylor gaining third-team honors. Welle was also an honorable mention All-American.

After claiming the conference tournament, Iowa State headed home to play host to the first two rounds of the NCAA Championship, earning a No. 3 seed after its great season. ISU's postseason run got off to a great start with a 92-63 opening round win over Saint Francis. Five Cyclones scored in double figures, led by Welle's 18 points and 14 rebounds. Frese added 17 points on 5-of-8 shooting from behind the three-point line.

A return trip to the Sweet 16 was on the line against Illinois. The Cyclones earned a 79-68 win behind another balanced offensive attack. Five players netted double figures again for ISU, led by Welle's 19 and Francis' 18 points. Iowa State made 25 three-pointers during the first two rounds combined, including an NCAA Midwest Region record 15 in the opening round win.

Penn State was Iowa State's opponent in the Sweet 16, held in Kansas City. In a closely matched contest, the Nittany Lions came away with a 66-65 upset victory. Freshman Lindsey Wilson led Iowa State with 15 points and Taylor added 10 points and 11 rebounds in the effort. Frese finished without a three-point make, as Iowa State went 7-for-23 from long distance as a team.

While Iowa State was unable to make back-to-back trips to the Elite Eight, the season was still one of the best in school history. Consecutive Sweet 16 appearances were unprecedented for the Cyclones, as were the Big 12 regular-season and postseason titles.

A third consecutive Sweet 16 showing was in the cards for Iowa State during the 2000-01 season, as the Cyclones continued their run of postseason success. After never reaching the NCAA Championship before coach Bill Fennelly arrived in 1995, Iowa State was now riding the wave of success.

Despite losing stars Stacy Frese and Desiree Francis to graduation, Iowa State continued its winning ways, tying the school record of 27 wins and earning a third-place showing in the Big 12 regular-season standings. The Cyclones started the season ranked 10th in the country and climbed as high as fifth in the rankings after an 11-0 start.

The Cyclones won their second consecutive Big 12 Championship crown, beating three ranked opponents, including No. 7 Oklahoma in the championship game. Junior Angie Welle was named MVP of the conference tournament with Megan Taylor and Lindsey Wilson also earning all-tournament team honors.

The Big 12 Championship title defense capped off a season that saw Welle finish fifth in the league in scoring (18.3 ppg), earn first-team all-conference honors and be named an All-American. Wilson and Taylor also earned all-Big 12 accolades. Fennelly was a finalist for Naismith Coach of the Year after turning in his fourth consecutive season of 25 or more wins.

Iowa State reached the century mark in its 100-61 win over Howard in the first round of the NCAA Championship. For the fourth season in a row Iowa State hosted the opening rounds of the postseason tournament, this time as a No. 2 seed, the highest placement ever for the Cyclones in the postseason. Welle led Iowa State with 23 points and 10 rebounds while four others reached double figures. The Cyclones shot 57.1 percent on the game, including 70 percent (21-30) in the first half.

Florida State stood between Iowa State and a third-straight trip to the Sweet 16. Behind another monster game from Welle, ISU cleared that hurdle, gaining an 85-70 win. Clinging to a five-point lead in the second half, Welle led the Cyclones on a 17-4 run to put things out of reach. Welle scored 26 and grabbed 10 boards while Taylor scored 22 after making five three-pointers.

Iowa State had made its third consecutive Sweet 16 appearance, moving on to Denver for the NCAA Championship's second weekend. The Cyclones ran into a tough Vanderbilt team that built a 40-27 lead in the first half and then held on for an 84-65 win. Welle scored 20, but it wasn't enough. Tracy Gahan added 14 and Wilson and Taylor each had 13 for the Cyclones.

The Cyclones' 79 wins over their last three seasons were the best three-season stretch in school history. The team also won 37 conference games during that time, far and away the best three-year league stretch for the Cyclones.

Postseason appearances have become a staple of the Iowa State women's basketball season, with the Cyclones making their fifth consecutive trip to the NCAA Championship during the 2001-02 campaign.

It was the final year for standout Angie Welle, who would leave Ames as the school's career leader in points, rebounds, blocked shots and field-goal percentage. Her final season was marked by her selection to the All-America second team after averaging 20.5 points and 11.3 rebounds per game. She was a finalist for the Naismith Player of the Year award and a member of the all-Big 12 first team.

With Welle patrolling the middle and guards Lindsey Wilson and Tracy Gahan running the offense, Iowa State notched 24 wins, the fifth consecutive 20-win season under coach Bill Fennelly. Wilson averaged 19.1 points and Gahan added 14.9 points per game to lead a balanced ISU attack. For his work, Fennelly was a finalist for Naismith Coach of the Year honors.

Iowa State started the season 12-0, moving up to fourth in the national polls. The Cyclones went 9-7 in Big 12 play and won two games at the Big 12 Championship, beating Nebraska and No. 10 Colorado before falling to No. 7 Baylor in the semifinals. Once again, a NCAA Championship call was coming.

The Cyclones earned the three-seed for their postseason run, and were given Temple for their opening round opponent. For the fifth straight season, Iowa State played its opening round games in front of the home fans at Hilton Coliseum.

The team didn't disappoint the Cyclone faithful, beating Temple 72-57. Mary Cofield, who came into the game averaging 6.3 points per game, hit all six of her three-point attempts and scored 20 points. Welle had 18 points and 15 rebounds while Gahan also notched a double-double with 12 points and 11 boards. With a 10-point halftime lead in hand, Iowa State went on runs of 15-5 and 9-0 in the second half to close out the game.

The second round pitted the Cyclones with the tournament's Cinderella, 11-seed BYU. The game was back-and-forth throughout, with Iowa State holding a two-point lead at the half. The Cougars stayed close, with Iowa State holding a 67-66 lead with 1:41 to play. A field goal and two free throws gave BYU a 70-67 lead with one minute remaining. After another BYU free throw, Welle hit a layup to pull within two, 71-69. BYU got free for another shot and then held on to win, 75-69.

Welle scored 22 and had 13 rebounds in the final game of her Iowa State career, while Gahan added 20 points. Wilson chipped in 14 points and eight assists for the Cyclones.

After a one-year absence, Iowa State returned to postseason play by advancing to the WNIT Final Four. It was a hodgepodge season for the Cyclones, as coach Bill Fennelly was forced to use 14 different starting lineups. It was also a transition season, with freshman Lyndsey Medders assuming full-time point guard duties midway through the campaign.

Even with the changing lineup, Iowa State was able to post an 18-15 record and showed the improvement late in the season that ensured the team would remain in the postseason picture for years to come.

Iowa State's regular season was highlighted by a 64-63 victory over No. 2 Texas Tech in Hilton Coliseum. Senior Anne O'Neil hit a 15-foot jumper with two-tenths of a second remaining to lift the Cyclones to the upset win. O'Neil was the team's leader offensively, the only Cyclone to average in double figures scoring, netting 12.4 points per game.

While not earning a spot in the NCAA Championship, Iowa State was placed in the Women's National Invitational Tournament for the first time in school history, playing host to all four games it played in the tournament.

The Cyclones opened against Idaho State, jumping out to an early lead and going on to win, 72-59. It was the first WNIT win for the Cyclones. O'Neil came off the bench to lead the team with 16 points while Megan Ronhovde and Lisa Kriener both added 14. A freshman, Ronhovde hit four three-pointers in the win.

Next up for Iowa State was Miami (Ohio). For the first 32 minutes of the game it was a fight, with Iowa State holding a three-point lead with eight minutes to play. Medders hit two free throws to spark the Cyclones to a 15-0 run over the final 8:40 that gave ISU a 71-57 win. Ronhovde led with 15 points, but Medders stole the show with 14 points and five assists. O'Neil hit 11-of-12 free throws to add 13 points.

Iowa State then punched its ticket to the WNIT Final Four with a 66-58 win over St. Josephs. After trailing much of the first half, Iowa State came back to hold a 27-26 lead at the break. It was back-and-forth in the second, with 11 lead changes and six ties. Medders made a layup with 2:20 to play – two of her team-high 19 points – giving ISU a 57-56 lead and putting the Cyclones on top for good.

ISU's run through the WNIT came to a close three days later with a 65-59 loss to UNLV. The Lady Rebels shot 27 free throws to Iowa State's eight, making up for the fact that Iowa State shot 43 percent from the floor compared to UNLV's 31 percent. The Cyclones held a 10-point lead in the second half, but UNLV whittled it away to come out with the victory. Medders completed a strong postseason run with 12 points and six assists, while Ronhovde added 10 points.

After a two-year hiatus from the NCAA Championship, Iowa State returned to the postseason tournament in 2004-05, punching its seventh ticket to the Big Dance under coach Bill Fennelly. Fennelly won his 200th game as Iowa State coach early in the season, accomplishing that milestone in just 10 seasons. Iowa State also returned to the national rankings, getting back into the Associated Press Poll for the first time since the end of the 2001-02 season.

Led by five seniors, Iowa State jumped out to an 18-2 start to the season. Senior Anne O'Neil led the way for ISU, finishing sixth in the Big 12 in scoring and gaining honorable mention All-America status. Katie Robinette was a presence down low, earning all-Big 12 second-team honors after averaging 14.9 points and 7.4 rebounds per game. Lyndsey Medders improved after her strong freshman season, netting 9.7 points and nearly seven assists per contest.

Fennelly continued to earn national respect for his coaching prowess, being named a finalist for the Naismith Coach of the Year Award. He was named the Russell Athletic/WBCA Coach of the Year winner for piloting ISU to a 23-7 record and 12-4 mark in the Big 12.

The Cyclones finished third in the conference regular season standings and drew Colorado in the opening round of the Big 12 Championship.

Medders hit a three-pointer with two-tenths of a second to play, to best the Buffaloes 64-62. Iowa State then lost a heartbreaker to Texas Tech in the quarterfinals of the tournament, 61-59. O'Neil's last second shot rimmed out, sending the Cyclones home from Kansas City.

The Cyclones were given a No. 7-seed in the NCAA Championship and sent to Fresno, Calif., for their opening round game. Their opponent would be Utah, a team with 26 wins out of the Mountain West Conference.

Iowa State jumped out to a 34-26 halftime lead, holding the Utes to 33 percent shooting in the opening period. Utah came out of the break strong, however, making eight of its first 10 shot attempts. Utah then went on an 11-0 run, pulling them into the lead. Iowa State was just 2-of-9 from behind the three-point line in the second half, allowing Utah to get back into the game and eventually earn a 73-61 win.

Medders hit three of Iowa State's eight three-pointers on the game, finishing with 12 points. O'Neil added 14 points for the Cyclones. While this was the final game for five ISU seniors, the Cyclones would bring back several key components the next season, allowing for more on-court success.

A postseason appearance was in order again for Iowa State in 2005-06, this time a trip to the Women's National Invitation Tournament. It was the second WNIT appearance for Iowa State in the last three seasons and the team's ninth postseason appearance in its last 10 campaigns.

The Cyclones posted an 18-13 record on the year, their 10th winning season in 11 tries under head coach Bill Fennelly. Iowa State was led by junior point guard Lyndsey Medders, a California native who earned all-Big 12 first-team honors. Medders set an ISU single-season record with 215 assists and led the team by averaging 16.5 points per game. Senior Brittany Wilkins earned all-conference honorable-mention status after a year that saw her average 16.1 points and 8.9 rebounds a game.

Iowa State also saw somewhat of a youth movement take place, with freshmen Heather Ezell and Nicky Wieben making significant contributions. Ezell started 30 games, leading Iowa State with 69 three-pointers made, and averaged 10 points per game. Wieben started 26 games, contributing eight points and five rebounds per contest.

ISU finished its non-conference schedule with a 9-2 mark, then went 7-9 during its conference slate. The team beat Texas in the first round of the Big 12 Championship before falling to Oklahoma.

Wisconsin-Green Bay was the Cyclones' WNIT opening-round opponent. Wilkins was dominant for the Cyclones, scoring a career-high 30 points and grabbing 16 rebounds. An 11 point second-half lead for the Cyclones turned into a four-point deficit with 40 seconds to play. Wilkins hit a three and Ezell made both ends of a one-and-one to send the game into overtime. Seventeen of Wilkins' points came in the second half.

In overtime Iowa State jumped out to an early lead behind back-to-back baskets by Wieben and never looked back, getting the 79-71 victory. Megan Ronhovde added 20 points and Wieben had 10 points and 13 rebounds for the Cyclones.

Iowa State fell behind Marquette in the teams' second-round game of the WNIT, and trailed by eight midway through the second half. Medders carried the Cyclones back into the game, scoring 14 of their last 18 points and getting assists on two of the other three baskets. After forcing overtime with their comeback, the Cyclones went cold in the extra period, going 0-for-10 from the field, allowing Marquette to earn a 69-63 victory.

Medders ended the game with 16 points and five rebounds, while Lisa Bildeaux added 15. Wilkins added 13 points and Ronhovde scored 10. Both of Iowa State's WNIT games were played at Hilton Coliseum.

Iowa State's standing in the women's college basketball world has changed drastically under coach Bill Fennelly. Fennelly inherited a team in 1995 that had never been to the postseason. In 12 short seasons, Fennelly had transformed that team into a perennial contender, a near lock for the postseason every year.

The first game of the 2006-07 season was a milestone for Fennelly, as he notched his 400th career victory in a 85-62 win over Cal State Fullerton. Later in the season, Fennelly earned his 250th win as ISU coach, far and away the winningest coach in Iowa State history.

On the court, Iowa State was led by senior point guard Lyndsey Medders. A preseason All-American, Medders didn't disappoint, leading the Cyclones in scoring and breaking the single-season assists record she had set the season before. Medders ended her career as ISU's all-time leader in assists with 719.

Sophomore Nicky Wieben earned second-team all-Big 12 accolades by scoring 12 points and grabbing nearly six boards a game. Junior college transfer Toccara Ross was a pleasant surprise, averaging 10 points and seven rebounds a contest.

It was a streaky season for the Cyclones. ISU started the season 13-1 and ended its regular season on a five game win streak. That run continued in the Big 12 Championship, as ISU won three games to advance to the championship game. That run included an upset win over No. 13 Texas A&M in the semifinals.

On a roll with wins in eight of its last nine games, Iowa State earned a six-seed in the NCAA Championship and a date with Washington in the first round. The game was played in Minneapolis and Iowa State fans flooded Williams Arena, bringing Hilton Magic with them. The Cyclones used runs of 11-0 and 17-4 in the first half to jump out to a 13-point lead at the break. ISU extended its lead in the second half and claimed a 79-60 win.

It was Iowa State's first NCAA Championship win since an opening round victory over Temple in 2002. Wieben scored 18 and Medders added 12 points and 10 assists to lead the Cyclones. As a team, Iowa State shot 57 percent from the floor and made 13-of-28 three-point attempts.

Georgia was next for the Cyclones. The Bulldogs raced out to a 20-2 lead to start the game and never let Iowa State back in it. Georgia jumped out to a 51-27 halftime lead and went on to a 76-56 victory. Georgia shot 61.3 percent in the first half while ISU shot 32 percent. Medders closed out her Iowa State career with another strong showing, scoring 11 and dishing out nine assists. Wieben led ISU with 13 points, while Ross added 11.

Bill Fennelly has produced many seasons of fine coaching at Iowa State. His 2007-08 effort may have been the best of them all. The Cyclones lost post players Nicky Wieben and Toccara Ross to ACL injuries early in the season, but ISU was able to overcome the losses and post a 21-13 overall record and earn its ninth trip to the NCAA Championship in the last 12 seasons.

Iowa State was 12-3 when Wieben went down with her injury, leaving the Cyclones extremely thin inside. The team's guards picked up the slack, hitting 267 three-pointers. Sophomore Alison Lacey was first in the Big 12 in three-point accuracy, hitting 40.7 percent of her shots from downtown. She was also fourth in the conference in assists. Those numbers helped her to all-Big 12 second-team honors.

Lacey led ISU with 14.2 points per game, while junior Heather Ezell added 10.5 points per contest. Freshman Kelsey Bolte chipped in 10.3 points per game.

Iowa State reached the semifinals of the Big 12 Championship, beating Colorado in the opening round and then coming from behind to nip No. 15 Kansas State in the second round. Lacey drove the length of the court, made her layup, was fouled and converted the free throw to put ISU up 66-65 with four seconds to play against the Wildcats. Lacey scored six points in the last 11 seconds of the game to bring Iowa State back.

Ezell also starred during the Big 12 Championship. The junior made 17 three-pointers in the three games ISU played in Kansas City, setting a new championship mark.

It was back to the NCAA Championship for the Cyclones, this time playing their opening round games at Wells Fargo Arena in Des Moines. Georgia Tech was first on ISU's plate. The Cyclones held a four-point halftime lead and used a 22-5 second-half run to open up a 13-point advantage. Georgia Tech chipped away at the lead, however, coming back to within two with four minutes to play.

Holding a one-point lead with a minute to play, Lacey hit a spinning shot in the paint to put ISU up 56-53 with 47 seconds remaining. Tech answered with a field goal to draw back within one. Lacey was fouled and sank both free throws and when the Yellow Jackets' last-second shot was off the mark the Cyclones had escaped with a 58-55 victory. Bolte hit five three-pointers to lead ISU with 19 points while Amanda Nisleit added 11 points and 12 rebounds.

The win allowed Iowa State to move on to a matchup with two-seed Rutgers. Rutgers shot 54 percent from the field on the game, forcing the Cyclones to play catch-up nearly the entire time. ISU pulled to within five twice in the second half, but could never get over the hump, falling 69-58. Ezell led Iowa State with 19 points while Nisleit added 15 and Lacey 10 points.

During its Jan. 31 game against Kansas State, Iowa State celebrated the 10-year anniversary of its 1999 Elite Eight run. Players from that legendary team returned to Hilton Coliseum where they were honored. Iowa State coach Bill Fennelly kept his team on the floor during the halftime ceremony, letting them see the players who took ISU on the greatest postseason ride in school history. It proved to be foreshadowing for the postseason run the 2008-09 Iowa State team was about to make.

The return of a healthy Nicky Wieben and standout guards Heather Ezell, Alison Lacey and Kelsey Bolte gave Iowa State balance inside and out. Ezell hit 88 three-pointers on the season, averaging a team-high 11.7 points per game.

Iowa State's 24-8 regular-season record earned the team a No. 4 seed in the NCAA Championship, traveling to Bowling Green, Ky., for the opening rounds. The Cyclones tied an NCAA Championship record with 16 three-pointers on their way to an 85-53 win over East Tennessee State in their first-round game. Lacey knocked down six treys to lead ISU, who had seven players make at least one triple during the game.

That win set up a second-round matchup with Ball State. The Cardinals had beaten Tennessee in the first round but were no match for Iowa State. The Cyclones hit another 10 three-pointers in the 71-57 win, punching their ticket for California and the Sweet 16.

Iowa State's Sweet 16 game against Michigan State in Berkeley, Calif., will go down as one of the greatest comebacks in school history. ISU was down seven with 1:10 to play, and its chance of advancing looked slim. Wieben grabbed a rebound off an Amanda Nisleit miss and put it back, allowing Iowa State to put on the full-court press. The team forced a turnover and Ezell banked in a three, putting the Cyclones within two with 50 seconds to play.

The Cyclone pressure worked again, forcing Michigan State to throw the ball away. Coming out of a timeout, Lacey hit another three-pointer to put ISU up 69-68. Michigan State had three chances to win, but all three shots bounced off the rim. It was an unbelievable 69-68 win, sending the Cyclones to the Elite Eight for the second time in school history.

The victory over Michigan State moved Iowa State into the Elite Eight where Stanford awaited. Stanford got out to an early lead and never let up, winning 74-53. Amanda Nisleit made five three-pointers and scored 17 to lead the Cyclones and earn all-region team honors. Ezell added 10 points and five assists.

Entering the 2009-10 campaign, ISU head coach Bill Fennelly knew he had a backcourt that could carry the Cyclones to another exciting postseason run, but with three new faces in the post, the season ahead was full of question marks. Senior point guard Alison Lacey, however, would leave no questions about her legacy at Iowa State.

ISU returned five seniors, but only Lacey and Denae Stuckey saw significant action throughout the season. In addition to his senior leaders, Fennelly was forced to rely on sharp shooter Kelsey Bolte and a stable of freshmen to take the Cyclones to a second-place finish in the Big 12 Conference and their fifth trip to the NCAA Sweet 16 in school history.

Lacey was voted a unanimous All-Big 12 First-Team selection by the league's coaches and persevered through a concussion and a three-week bout with pneumonia that kept her out of four games, including the final two of the regular season and the Big 12 Championship.

On Selection Monday, the Cyclones celebrated as their 23-6 regular-season record earned them a No. 4 seed and the right to play at Hilton Coliseum in the NCAA Championship.

Iowa State fans showed their passion for women's basketball once again, ranking second in attendance among all NCAA first and second round sites, behind only Tennessee. The Cyclones made them proud by putting on a performance those fans will not soon forget.

Lacey returned to the court in the NCAA First Round to face Lehigh and paced ISU to a 79-42 rout. Freshman Anna Prins recorded her first career double-double in the outing with a career-high 21 points and a career high-tying 10 rebounds. That set up a match with a pesky Green Bay team.

Iowa State battled back from an eight-point second-half deficit to come away with a hard fought 60-56 victory over Green Bay to advance to the Sweet 16 for the second consecutive season. ISU was one of just five teams to advance to the round of 16 in both 2009 and 2010. As a reward, the Cyclones moved on to face No. 1 Connecticut in Dayton, Ohio.

The Huskies hit 42.3 percent of their shots from behind the arc and 39.4 percent from the field as they defeated Iowa State, 74-36. UConn went on to win its second consecutive national title with a championship win over Stanford.

The loss did not diminish a great season for the Cyclones and a great career by the ISU senior class, which was one of only 20 in the nation to make four consecutive NCAA appearances (from 2007-2010) and became the third winningest class in school history by victories (99).

Lacey made her mark on the ISU history books as the only player in school history to record 1,500 points, 500 assists and 500 rebounds on her way to honorable-mention All-America honors.

For the first time in recent memory, an Iowa State women's basketball team entered a season with a question mark at point guard.

In his 15 years at Iowa State, head coach Bill Fennelly almost always knew which player would be the starter at point guard. The 2010-11 season was different after the graduation of Alison Lacey, a first-team All-Big 12 pick the previous season, and no sure-thing heir apparent.

The Cyclones did return three other starters, including senior sharpshooter Kelsey Bolte, who would go on to have one of the best seasons in school history. Along with Bolte, sophomores Chelsea Poppens and Anna Prins also returned as starters.

By the start of the season, two newcomers had proven themselves as worthy starters. Freshman Hallie Christofferson stepped right out of Class A Iowa ball into the Big 12 and went on to average over nine points per game. She would earn Big 12 All-Freshman team honors.

That left point guard as the only other unsettled position and junior college transfer Lauren Mansfield held the upper-hand in the battle early and never let go, starting all 33 games for the Cyclones and finishing fifth in the Big 12 in assists.

Mansfield's job was made easier by Bolte, who averaged 16.9 points per game en route to becoming a unanimous first-team All-Big 12 selection and an All-American.

The 2011 Cyclones were Bolte's team and her leadership was proven time and time again. Bolte led the Cyclones in scoring 19 times and was the only player to average double figures.

The Cyclones finished the regular season 22-10 overall and 9-7 in Big 12 play, which was good for a fifth-place finish in the nation's top conference. It marked the fifth-straight 20-win season for the Cyclones.

Iowa State was then selected to its fifth-straight NCAA Tournament, making the Cyclones one of just 20 teams to earn a spot in the last five NCAA Championships.

The Cyclones were shipped East to Durham, N.C. as a seventh-seed to face Marist. The Red Foxes used a 25-4 first-half run to take a 20-point lead. Iowa State closed the gap to six with just 4:20 remaining following a three by Prins, but the Red Foxes answered and went on to win 74-64, ending the Cyclones' season.

Bolte ended her brilliant career with 1,639 points, sixth all-time in school history. Her 276 three-pointers ranks third on the Iowa State record list.

Along with Bolte and Christofferson, Poppens also was recognized by the Big 12's coaches. The sophomore drew a team-high 36 charges and was named to the league's all-defensive team.

Fennelly also added another milestone to his already impressive résumé when he picked up his 500th victory as a head coach in a November win over Drake.
